

Restored Christianity, by Donna E. Lane, Ph.D., and Hayden J. Lane, M.A.

Reviewed by Rev. William G. Houser, Ph.D.
Author, Who Is this Jesus Christ?

Restored Christianity may be likened to a purifying process, where the authors, like patient jewelers heat and purify their material until all the dross has been removed and the simple precious metal remains. Of course, their project and scope is giant in size: finding the elemental core of the Holy Scriptures after separating out centuries of wrongful, if well-intentioned, interpretations which have reduced the pure and simple content of God's Word and Will.

The authors work in tandem, one dealing with the linguistic and historic roots of the original Bible writings, and the other setting them in a context of Christian living for today. The effort works, and is gratifyingly successful in helping the earnest reader understand God's intentions, His plans and hopes, and greatest of all, His unconditional love for humankind represented forever by the incarnation and sacrifice of His own Son, Jesus Christ. This is not a Reformed work, or a Protestant work, or a Catholic work, this is a Christian work and is refreshingly focused on the Gospel basics that ignited the world when the Good News was first preached in its truest and most earnest forms to a desperate world.

Restored Christianity is work of faith, hope, and love, above all love. Now how many books can you find that brings you those? Read it and grow.